

US 2016 Election Results

In most circumstances, it is the case that the electoral votes for a state are quite close to split evenly between the two major parties. Despite the fact that the amount of people voting one way or the other is quite evenly split, the vast majority of the land area is red. This provides further insight that areas more likely to vote Republican are more sparsely populated and areas more likely to vote Democrat are more urban.

- Voters in each State
- Democrat Votes
 - Republican Votes
 - Other Votes
- State Electoral Votes
- CLINTON
 - TRUMP